

REINFORCED BY THE RIFLES.

The Nationals Visit the Light Infantry Fair With All Their Friends.

The Rink Filled to Overflowing and Hundreds Turned Away.

Government Officers and Representatives of the Virginia Militia Also Present.

Scenes and Incidents of the Evening—The Record of the Voting.

Churches that lack congregations, theaters that have no audiences and business men who want custom should contract with the National Rifles, of this city, to attend at either place, for they bring crowds. They brought a crowd to the Light Infantry fair last night that packed the rink far beyond its capacity. It streamed through the entrance until there was not room for another one—not even a reporter—and formed upon the sidewalk and street till there were more than 1,500 persons were vainly waiting to get inside. The infantry managers tried to close the doors, but there was a physical impossibility. With infinite toil and endeavor a passageway had been made for the Rifles, and they entered the vast hall with the bounding step and the machine-like precision of victorious veterans, but once inside, the admiring crowds broke down every barrier and filled up all space. The Rifles tried to march around the hall, but ere they got half way through they were stopped by a multitude that only a charge of bayonets could have dispersed. And there they stood, the "red coat knights," literally like bees pressed in honeycomb, for on either side was a wall of beautiful women which arrested their onward progress, and beyond the dense crowd was reinforced every second by fresh comers anxious to behold the Rifles in array. In fact, so dense and packed was the assembly that at one time the managers in despair took down the voting tablets to afford more space.

The Rifles were escorted to the rink by a detachment of the Light Infantry and the Marine band. As they entered the hall they were preceded by a platoon of the infantry in full uniform, then by a section of the band, then a squad of honorary members of the Rifles, and then the famous company itself, numbering six hundred and eighty men. Their dress and indigo uniform flashed its brilliant and beautiful hues in the glare of the electric radiance with superb effect. Their entrance was the signal for a round of applause. And they truly made a splendid appearance. As they entered the rink, a man in the company who was not a fine specimen of manhood. Their march was as one man. Every step was in perfect time, every movement was with the precision of machinery. All the while the holiday pomp of war were in their gallant bearing, in their brilliant uniform, in their quick springy buoyant steps. The high discipline, the perfect drill which the Rifles have attained speak volumes for the skill and knowledge of their officers and for the intelligence and capacity of its members. To behold them to be inspired with the military fever. Washington is justly proud of its two crack military organizations—the National Rifles and the Light Infantry.

After passing around the hall once, during which evolution they literally got "stuck" in the crowd, and had to stand for fifteen minutes en masse of admiration to the thousands of beautiful women present, the visiting company then moved to the rink, where a south portion of the rink, where a brief speech of welcome was made, and they were formally given the freedom of the hall and invested with all the privileges of guests. And then they were introduced to the girls. Leaving the Rifles thus in clover, the reporters did their best to circulate through the crowd and pick up incidents of this, the most notable and successful fair that was ever held in Washington.

As soon as the Rifles began to circulate through the hall the girls, armed with little books, made a red coat object of assault wherever they found it. The brave boys opened their pockets with ready fingers, and scattered their money in numerous boxes clapped by the girls. The Rifles were the center of a throng of females all the evening. He voted for every candidate for everything and took chances in all the articles offered, from a baby crib down to a carriage wheel. The crowd was so great, if any kind. The crowd was so great, however, that the young ladies found it nearly impossible to go on forays, but they still hunting was so profitable that the receipts were larger than ever before. Notwithstanding the fact that the Rifles were rapidly through a crowd of ladies, but they were stopped by significant warnings from the ladies and Rifles.

The voting received a great boom, and several new candidates' names were placed upon the blackboard. The Rifles, in the center badge is being carried on with energy, and has narrowed down to a fight between Messrs. J. T. Dyer and H. E. Bauer. The latter gentleman has offered a diamond ring to the lady securing the greatest number of votes for him, and one bright-eyed girl who already wears diamonds in her ears, inveigled over a hundred visitors into voting for her candidate last night. In some quarters she has exercised such an effect that several young men are going to mortgage their salaries to help her win the ring. And it could not add a fairer hand. Late last evening the commissioned officers of the 3d Virginia infantry, and some of Gen. Fitz Lee's staff officers, visited the fair, and were received with cheering by the Light Infantry and the Rifles. Some of them said, upon leaving, that they were glad they had purchased return tickets for home, as their cash had gone the way of all cash—into woman's white but grasping fingers. Other military and naval gentlemen, who were over the fair this week and the first four nights of next week—the managers having decided to extend it until to-morrow week. The voting, however, will close on Saturday night.

A trunk, which was sat on at booth No. 16, (Mrs. Bondinot's), was won by Mr. Vail. His address is desired.

FATE.
She was her father's loveliest daughter; He was his mother's dearest son; So they said to him, "Gladly I'll be your partner," Said he, "I haven't a one."

So two young hearts that were hopelessly beating, Her for his money and his for a maid— Soon far away from each other were flitting— Fate is as cruel as boarding house hash.

ALSO FATE.
She glided along through the fair With a diamond like a star; And never she thought That a splinter had caught In her curl and pulled off her back hair.

On a Rifle she leaned tenderly, And her face was as sweet as could be; But the back of her head, Whence the hair had fled, Was a sight such as seldom you see.

NEWS FROM NEWPORT NEWS.

Senator Beck Viewing the March of Improvement and Learning to Water His English.

United States Senator Beck, of Kentucky, Judge Charles E. Phelps and Col. C. P. Montague, of Baltimore, were among the many visitors to Newport News last Saturday. All were deeply interested in and surprised at the extensive mechanical appliances and natural facilities for shipping purposes found there. Senator Beck seemed specially interested in the immense piers, grain elevators, coal docks and coal "pockets," in operation and in process of construction. He was the "guide" of the party, and stood for half an hour intently studying the automatic switch at the end of the coal dock. As car after car propelled by gravitation alone, went down one track, backed and switched itself on to another, he seemed puzzled. Finally, unaided, he caught the "idea," and was as happy as if he had solved the problem of reconciling free trade and protection.

Nothing, however, apparently trivial to others, escaped his quick business eye. Speaking to a laborer in charge of a dredging scow, he said: "Where do you deposit your dredgings?" "Sir?" Again, in a louder tone, "Where do you deposit your dredgings?" The bewildered scowman stood silent as if Greek or Scotch had been spoken. The judge, coming to the rescue, cried out: "Where do you dump that stuff?" "Oh! out there in the channel." The senator laughed heartily when he was warned by Mr. Montague that he should "water" his English a little, and remember that he was not addressing the United States senate. The whole party left, well pleased with their visit, for Fortress Monroe.

Bethel Historic and Literary Association.
An interesting meeting of the Bethel Historic and Literary association was held last evening. Mr. M. A. S. Carey presented the paper for discussion, entitled "Some Practical Suggestions for Colored Men." She laid up the achievements of the fathers of the negro race in America as examples for the young men of the present generation to emulate. She urged that the negro ought to take a more practical view of life and turn himself about to do something. "There are gold and diamonds in Africa and other portions of the earth," she said, "and get them. Engage in business, learn trades, and be a useful people." Mrs. Carey was followed by Mr. Arthur C. Smith, who thought that she had not been very practical in her suggestion. Africa, he claimed, was too far away, and those men held up by her for emulation lived in the past. Mr. Norman, of Ohio, agreed with the paper, as also did Messrs. Wood and Dobson, of Virginia. Mr. Ellery thought that the paper encouraged a diversity of industry among our people, and that was a consummation devoutly to be wished. Mr. E. J. Waring thought the whole discussion of the race problem resolved itself into a question of social equality. That is what keeps the prejudices between the two great races upon this continent.

Wedding Festivities.
The marriage of Mr. John Casper to Miss Annie Mary Lutz was solemnized at St. Mary's church yesterday morning at 9 o'clock by Rev. Father Tewes. In the evening a reception was held at the family residence, 418 H street northwest, where a large number of friends gathered to congratulate the happy couple. Dancing was indulged in, and the hospitality of the charming hostess and genial host, Mr. Casper, was much appreciated. Mr. Andrew Hofer acted as groomsmen, with Messrs. John B. Geier and John A. Schaeffer as ushers. The wedding presents were numerous and costly.

The marriage of Mr. Russell B. Taylor, of the office of the secretary of the treasury, and Mrs. Gertrude C. Skelton was celebrated yesterday afternoon at the residence of the bride's mother, No. 1429 S street. The Rev. Wm. A. Bartlett, D. D., of the New York Avenue church, officiated. After the ceremony, which was entirely private, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor left for the Excelsior, on a bridal trip to Fortress Monroe and the south. The happy couple will receive the hearty congratulations of innumerable friends.

Archaeological Find.
A party engaged in making surveys and archaeological investigations in North Carolina, under the direction of the bureau of ethnology, has just discovered near Mount Pisgah, in that state, two prehistoric aboriginal mounds containing an unusually rich and valuable collection of polished stone axes, celts, and other Indian implements. The mounds had apparently served as burial places, and also contained remains of human bodies. The collection of implements, which constitutes one of the richest and most valuable "finds" recently made in the eastern United States, will be brought to Washington and added to the collection in the National museum.

Theatre Comique.
The programme at the Comique this week is fully up to the standard of entertainment of that popular place of amusement. The American Four are a heavy attraction, and their performances illicit loud applause. The after piece is very funny, and introduces the Four and the full strength of the company. The benefit of Mr. George S. Smith, the business manager of the Comique, which will take place on Friday night, should not be forgotten. Beside the regular company, Mr. Smith will present a score of volunteers.

EAST WASHINGTON.
The rebellion of the Daines, an interesting opera, was rendered at Odd Fellows hall (southeast) last evening by a number of the pupils of St. Mark's Sunday school. The proceeds will be applied to the church building fund.

The marriage of Miss Mammie Holland, of this city, to Mr. Joseph Hellen, of New York, treasurer of the Pacific Mail Steamship company, will be solemnized at St. Peter's church at 2 o'clock to-day.

A musical entertainment and promenade will be given by a number of colored citizens at Congress hall, on the thirtieth instant. The committee consists of James N. Cephas, John Peck, F. A. Dyson, John Marshall, and J. R. Robey.

The foundation of the new St. Mark's, P. E. church, corner of Third and D streets southeast, has been completed, and the work of erecting the upper portion of the building will be commenced this week.

Our Selection.
For young people's wear, for school as well as dress purposes, is more attractive than ever. EISENMAN BROS., the Most Prominent Clothiers and Tailors, Corner Seventh and E.

Secret Societies and the Catholics.
A sensible priest, who has his worldly side, remarked to me during the week: "You can now see why our church denounces and forbids secret societies. It was to save strong, wild races like the Irish and the Italian peasantry from indulging in the law of their origin and doing secret crimes under the incentive of a dark superstition, such as they so readily take the way in." You see Tammany Hall and what blind obedience it can get out of Irishmen? Now make a secret lodge inside of that, out-bound and exempt from the church's confessional, and teach it to kill, to use poison, and the way in is paved.

The foundation of the new St. Mark's, P. E. church, corner of Third and D streets southeast, has been completed, and the work of erecting the upper portion of the building will be commenced this week.

ment. These safe-exited satraps demand blood, combustion, and torpor, and Barmal is made their martyr. Independence is worth nothing to Ireland if her people must be demonized first."

A Whack at Quality, Not Quantity.
Chicago is hard to please. The next day after the troupeful club speech making, one of her papers put forth a plea for "still cheaper gas."

A HUNTER who lives at Bear Run, hurt his arm by the kick of a gun, but St. Jacobs Oil cured him before swelling began.

What a Country Doctor Did Not Live to See—The Triumph of To-Day.

The writer's father was a country doctor, and, with all their faults, country doctors are, as a class, noble and self-sacrificing men. Through all weathers, in all seasons, and over the worst of roads they drive on missions of mercy—generally for small compensation, and often for none at all. To the country doctor in question, as he sat in his tummy, an Irishman who had stopped him on the road, was relating his suffering from what he called "a dreadful pain in me chest."

"Oh, Pat," said the doctor, perhaps impatient at the detention, "put a mustard plaster on your chest."

"An' will that sock the pain, doctor?" asked Pat, wanting a foundation for his faith.

"It won't hurt you, anyway, Pat," answered the doctor, whipping up his horse. Then, continuing to his companion: "My son, I wish somebody would invent a plaster that would suck out pain, as Pat put it. I have plenty of plasters, some of which I make myself and others that are patented, but I am free to admit to you that there isn't much virtue in any of them."

This was years ago, and the good doctor is gone where, we are told, no one is ever sick. He didn't live to see or hear of BENSON'S CAPSINE PAIN OUS PLASTER, which, in Pat's rude phrase "sucks out" so much pain to-day. The doctor, in connection with his practice, kept a little village drug store, where he dispensed the cheap and common plasters of the time, "whose merit," he used to say, "must reside in the holes, for he didn't see as they had any other."

For that pain of yours try the CAPSINE, which was used in the plaster itself. Price, 25 cents.
